CANTON.

Canton, June 8th. WINE TAX DISTURBANCES.

The vexed question of the wine tax still continues to be a great source of trouble in the province. There have been more or less serious troubles in Cauton, Kong Moon and other places and the establishment of a branch office in Fatshau for the collection of the tax has been sufficient to cause an outbreak in that town also. From fall reports just received it appears that on Monday evening at about 4 p.m. a body of about 1,000 men went to this branch office and entirely demolished it. Every stock of furniture in the place was broken to fragments, and the building was left a ruin. The leader of the in the proceeding to be searched to show that robbery was not their object. The rictors then formed into five sections, and went throughout the town to destroy the houses and shops of the partners and friends of the wine monopolist. Very great loss was incurred, especially by Wong Choung Wah, a medicinal oil manufacturer, who is widely known wherever Chinese dwell. The police arrested three rictors andtook them to the station, whereupon a of strong body marched to the station and threatened to storm the building and slay the police if the men were not immediately set free. The police inspector in terror of his life at once accoded to the demands of the mob and the men were set at liberty. The rioting continued without a pause nutil 1 a.m. on Tuesday when most of the mob dispersed. The local mandacin dared not interfere, and as he had only a handful of soldiers under him it was useless to attack the huge mob. Telegrams were sent to Canton, and early on Tuesday morning a small band of 40 soldiers was sent to restore order. The presence of this troop caused the mob again to take to the streets, while the residents in fear of what might happen barricaded their houses and shops and closed the street gates. In the afternoon, however, the Kwong Chow Brigadier-General arrived with a large force, and order was soon restored and the shopkeepers again opened their doors. Several arrests have been made in connection with this ricting. but it is only fair to the mob to record that they confined their attention solely to those connected with the wine monopoly. It is truly astonishing the amount of resoutment that has been caused by the establishment of this monopoly. The tax is but a small one, and considering that wine is a luxury and not a necessity, it is indeed surprising that so much opposition has been shown. The people are perfectly aware that the Government by abolishing licensed gambling sacificed an enormous annual sum, and onewould think that for such a grand moral victory as the suppression really was the people would be prepared to make slight sacriace on their part. To those who have been led to believe that the Chinaman drinks nothing but tea, the news of all these disturbances about strong drink will probably come as a shock. The fact is that a very large quantity of alcohol is consumed by these people, and although opium is now not so much in vogue, there is no doubt that alcohol is largely taking its place. This disturbance also very prominently brings to the notice of the public a most unpleasant trait of the Chinese character namely, that of taking the law into their own hands and committing wholesale damage by way of protest against grievances. The impatience of control that characterises almost every section of the native community is one of the most serious and disturbing factors that claim the attention of all in authority. THE YUET-HAN RAILWAY QUESTION.

> At the recent meeting of shareholders held to protest against the proposed nationalisation of the Yust-Han Railway the following resolutions were passed :-(1) All possible efforts must be made to keep the railway in the hands of the merchants. (3) That Viceroy Chaung be requested to draw up a memorial to the Throne protesling against this scheme. (4) That telegrams be sent to Honan, AN UNUSUAL OCCURRENCE.

RAILWAY AGITATION IN CHANGSHA.

The correspondent of the N.-C. Paily News at Changshe, writing on May 26th, gives the following interesting account of the agitation in Hunan against the nationalisation of the railways : - returned here from Shanghai in the columns of your Chinese contemporary, the Shen Pao: "At Changeha at a meeting called to consider the question of the taking over of the Hunan section of the Trunk Railway from Canton to Wuchang, it was decided that rather than allow this to be done the people would shut shop. shut work, shut farming (1) shut schools and HONGKONG SHARE this until death."

For Ane words, lofty sentiment and such actual shedding of blood on behalf of a beloved province as can be done by chopping off or even attempting to hite off fingers, Hunan leads the way. The depths of provincial patriotism (if one may be llowed to apply to a province that belongs by right to the whole empire) have been stirred once more by the inconsiderateness of Peking, which will persist in ignoring the right of Hunan to do what she will inside her borders. first warning of the coming storm arrived in the form of a telegram from Mr. Ton Yuankai, the uble president of the Provincial England rate of discount remains at 3 per cent., Assembly, who happened to be in Piking with and the open market rate at 2 per cent. Survey was provided for by a resolution that put it in the hands of students who had returned or were about to return from Japan, America and Europe. The resolution was careful to add that these young men were to undertake the job without pay. The line was to be laid out at once in one hundred and twenty-five sections of ten li each, so that it could be completed by June, 1912.

Finally, resolutions arranged that should any foreign overseer be appointed he was to be opposed and obstructed in every possible way; the same treatment was given to any Chinese (I am not sure whether Manchu was included) who might be sent to represent the national board of railways which is under the direction of Sheng Kung-pao.

A SORRY PATRIOT. The Hall used by the Assembly is not a very hig one, but the Chinese speakers, unused to addressing large crowds, found it necessary to aid their voices with a blackboard. Thereon was written the Governor's letter. It was followed with various sentiments not arrang. ed for by the multitude of committees. " Sheng Kung pao" - might one render that by "The Right Honourable Mr. Sheng " P ---- was transformed into "Sheng the Robber." "Let him be slain," wrote somebody to the intense delight of the students present. The meeting soon got completely out of hand and before long the sickening spectacle of a young idiot who put his finger into his month and bit till the blood flowed was presented to the mob-and, so it is said the mob was much impressed at this willingness to shed one's life blood for the cause; and this was followed by another bite! This is not the first time that the "gentry' have conjured up, like Frankenstein, a more horrible monster than they intended. The more staid part of the meeting became alarmed at the further preparations for fighting the world at large, burning the Governor's yamen or any

Somehow or other, the meeting came to an end. Monday was a day of revelry for all that was an i-foreign in word but not deed. The city was flooded with leaflets and placards which were allowed full swing without a single word of protest from the "deeply sympathetic" Governor or any other Chinese official. There was a rapid exodus from the city of almost all the foreign ladies and children. The British Consulate was visited by a large number of the foreign community who were anxious to know what was best to be done.

THE OFFICIALS MOVE. It was Tuesday, the 16th, before the Chinese officials made any move. It is significant that the real turn in the tide was due to a small rhyming leadet issued from the railway bureau assuring the "voluntary" contributors that their money was safe. "Prepare to shot your shops," was the message passed along by the we should do so," was the reply of the elected every five years by the Chamter of shopkeepers.

The Government were attacked on two sides, as the Opposition called for still greater efforts to ensure naval supremacy. The speech that aroused the greatest interest was delivered by the Leader of the (position, whose earnest appeal for a settlement of all future controversies between this country and the United States by arbitration was most affective. Mr. McKenna made his statement on the motion for going into Committee of Supply on and the fact that in 1914 our total force in the Navy Estimates. At the outset he plumed himself on the fact that the expenditure for combined forces of the Triple Alliance was a which the Admiralty was responsible, amounting now to £44,392,500, was defrayed without Mr. McKenna, interposing, said that Mr

The number of offer ships would be reduced this year by seven, which would be scrapped, and if other nations reduced the number of their pre-Dreadnoughts we might be able to make further reductions in 1912-13 and 1913-14.

Eventually Rosyth would probably be made a firstclass naval base. Justifying the increase of the personnel of the Navy, he pointed that destroyers could not be scrapped like bottleships and cruisers, and that the new cruisers carried a large complement of men. The Admiralty based their estimate of men upon war requirements, and upon that basis the personnel asked for was not more than adequate

MR. LEE'S CRITICISMS. The member for Fareham agreed that the spring of 1914 was the critical period, for we should then have 29 ships of the Dreadnought type in European waters and the Triple Alliance would have 29. Thus no margin was left for accidents. The Gove.nment had encouraged excessive competition, and now their demand was below our needs. The programme for new cruisers was insufficient, no provision being made against the new perils which would menace us on our trade routes if the Declaration of Loudon was privateering; armed merchant vessels were to be set loose to prey upon hostile commerce. Navy would hardly be worth having. He deplored the fact that there was no longer a recognized

Mr. Adamson, the Labour member for West Fife, who seconded the amendment, contended that the cost of our armaments ought to be reduced gradually, and that the money set free should be used for the development of national industric. This would prevent fluctuations in employment.

MR. BALVOUR.

Mr. Balfour, who spoke next, brought the debate up to a high level, and what he said made a great impression. He felt, like other members, that these constantly increasing Estimates were more than a national inconvenience, but it was necessary to endure what was almost an intolerable burden in order not to -run the risk of a possible dieaster. If soft words and diplomacy could do anything, by all means. let them be tried again. Up to now, however, they had failed to procure disarmament, and we had to face the hard facts of the situation as they would present themselves in 1914. As M Lee had shown, in that year there would only be 29 British ships of the Dreadnought type in European waters and the Triple Alliance would have the same number. It was necessary to keep in mind that in addition to our responsibilities in other rarts of the world we had to maintain our supremacy in home waters and in the Mediterranean. No other nation had such a task. For more than two centuries it had been recognized that our interests in the Mediterranean were among the most important which we had to defend. We could not ignore the fact that at this moment three Meditor anean Powers-he excluded Turkey-were building capital ships like those we were constructing European waters would only be equal to the matter of grave concern.

MB. TAFT AND ADDITRATION. Mr. Balfour next referred to the recent utterance of the President of the United States in which that eminent statesman suggested that existing treaties for arbitration might be honour as well as points involving national interests. This suggestion deserved careful carried into effect generally, he saw no season why such an arrangement should not be made between the kindred communities of Great Britain and the United States. The amendment was taken to a division, and was rejected by 216 votes against 54.

JAPANESE STATESMEN.

---THE BEOF T PROVOTIONS. The Tokyo correspondent of The Times writing on the recent promotions of Japanese statesmen says :-

Among the five Japanese peers who have ust received a stop in rank the most interesting are, of course, the Marquis Katsura. Count Komura, and Viscount Terauchi, to be "Prince," "Marquis," and "Count," respectively. The proximate cause of these honours is, of course. the annexation of Korea, in which drama the three statesmen figured as leading actors. But it had long been recognized that Prince Katsura was destined to reach the highest place attained by any of the "Elder Statesmen." His career has been almost meteoric, for to the general public his name was virtually unknown before 1894, when, as a lieutenant-general, he commanded the division that marched across Southern Manchuria from the Yalu to Yingkow. The resistance that his troops encountered, however, did not suffice to give éclat to the operation, and its difficulties being appreciated by experts alone, Katsura did not reap much renown, though his Sovereign rewarded him with the title of Viscount. Thus when, five years later, he undertook to form a Cabinet in circumstances which had baffled Prince Ito. the issue attracted only a medicum of attention. Failure was generally foretold. But with failure Katsura's name seems destined to be never associated. Instead of sinking in the mud of party politics he made it a stepping stone to success, and instead of an ad interim Ministry, with a life of a few months at most, he organized a Cabinet which lasted eight years out of the ensuing ton. Moreover, in those eight years three memorable pages were added to Japan's history—the alliance with England, the war with Russin, and the annexation of Korea. extended so as to include points of national In fact Princo Katsura's hand had steered the State throughout the most momentous opech of its modern existence, and the recognition MARINE INSURANCES.—Unions have been those for the current year was £3,788,800, consideration, and whether or not it could be his services have now received is justly earned. THE MANQUIS KOMURA. The Maronis Komura is a younger man than

Prince Katsura, the latter being in his 64th year, the former in his 56th. Komura commenced his official career in 1884 as a Secretary in the Foreign Office, and his first appointment of any importance was as Civil Administrator of Antong during the war of 1894-95 with China. Thue like Prince Katsura his public with the past 16 years. During that comparatively brief interval, he represented his country at Seoul in the troubled days after the ing the conference chamber at Portsmouth he well knowthat he was about to sacrifice his popularity at home, yet he did not flinch from the duty; and when after representing his country from 1905 to 1901 as the first Japanese Ambassador at the Court of St. James's, he resumed his portfolio in the second Katsura Cabinet, he had the satisfaction of seeing that his wise moderation at Portsmouth was now ENGLISH. appreciated by his countrymen as sincerely as t had been applauded throughout by the world Very soon the Korean problem pressed for radical solution. Not only the acquiescence of the Koreum people, but also the concurrence of the nations had to be won, and the Marquis Komura's wise management contributed not a little to both results. It may fairly be claimed for him that he had done more to enhance his country's international reputation than any other Minister for Foreign Affairs throughout

COUNT TERAUCHI. General Count Terauchui saw his first active service in the Satsums civil wer of 1878, when members, and the bulk of the Radical Party, he lost his right arm; but his reputation has in view of the important Constitutional issue been won in the field of administration and that was awaiting settlement, would do nothing organization rather than in the leading of that might weaken the Government. There troops. After much service on the Staff and in fore with great regret they acquiesced in pro- connection with military education, he accepted posals which, in other circumstances, would be | the portfolio of War in the first Katsura Cabinet, opposed to the bitter end. After Mr. Yerburgh and has held it ever since. Throughout the had given expression to the views of the Navy struggle with Russia his management of the department of supplies-reinforcements, provisions, and munitions-elicited universal applause and obtained for him the title of Viscount. Of late years the nation has come to regard him as a probable Premier, and it was felt that a wise choice had been made when the Gazette announced his appointment to be the first Governor-General of Korea. He has amply justified the confidence reposed in him, for his great gifts of organization and foresight have achieved the feat of averting every semblance of accident or miscalculation.

It is noteworthy that Prince Katsura, the Marquis Komura, and Count Terauchi all possess English decorations—namely, the G.C.V.O., theK.C.B., and the G.C.M.G., respectively. COURT NOBLES

The other two. Prince Tokudaiji and Count Watsnabe, are less known to foreigners. The former is one of the old Court nobles who trace their descent direct to scions of the Imperial I smily. He has served ever since the Restoration in the capacity of either Minister of the 84,539 Household or Lord High Chamberlain and Keeper of the Privy Seal, and as his title of " Marquis" may be said to have descended to him, it is felt that his promotion to be "Prince after 44 years' uninterrupted discharge of such high duties is natural and proper. He is the eldest brother of the Marquis Saionji, but no 10,697 one suggests that this political relation has WHY GO TO anything to do with his promotion. As for Count Watanabe, he, too, owes his elevation from the rank of Viscount to services connected with the Imperial Household, of which be became Minister in 1910, after several years in the capacity of Vice-Minister and Director of

BOARD OF TRADE ANNOUNCEMENT. The Board of Trade last month, through the Foreign Office, received a telegram from his Majesty's Embassy at Tokyo to the effect that under the most-favoured-nation clause of the Angle-Japanese Commercial Treaty of the 3rd of April last the United Kingdom will be entitled until the 4th of August to the rates of Customs duty and to the consting trade privileges provided for by the Franco-Japanese Commercial Treaty of the 4th of August, 1896, and Supplementary Convention of the 25th of December, 1898. The rates of Customs duty in question affect a number. of articles of importance to British trade, including the principal descriptions of cotton are as a general rule those at present in force under the Angle-Japan Treaty of 1894, and information regarding them may be obtained from the Commercial Intelligence Branch of the Board of Trade, 73, Basinghall-street. regards other British goods the new statutory tariff of Japan or the conventional rates of duty established by the Anglo-Japanese Treaty of when the French Treaty expires, they will be put into force as regards all British goods.

Used Cuticura Treatment and Has Never Seen Any Sores Since.

"Sores first commenced on my arms about January, 1908, and I thought they would go away as they came, but they still got worse. The next part they affected was my legs and toes, and l could not sleep at night for the pain, especially when got warm. About July, I saw a chemist whom I was -well acquainted with, and he gave me some pills and oln timent, and also a powder. After about a month the spots still remained, and were as bad as ever, so I went to the --- Hospital. and they also gave me some cintment to use. After using four boxes of this, I gave One night I saw what the Cuticura Remedles had done for someone. After using a little Cuticura Ointment, I felt the itching to be less painful. I then obtained a box of Cuticura Ointment and a tablet of Cuticura Soap, and after using one box, I felt a great deal better. I had altogether three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and have used the Cuticura Soap regularly sluce then. Altogether I was a month-using the Cuticura' froatment, and have great pleasure in saving. I have never seen a sight of any of the sores since. I do not know what the spots were but I thought they were ecrema. I am overflowing with joy to think I have gotten rid of such a horribte, itching pain." (Signed) Peter Harrow, 38, Ivydalo Road, Mossley Hill, Liverpool, England, Nov. 5, 1900.

A City Constable

Nervous Depression, Lassitude, Rheumatism

From all lands, deputations come to study the method which has made the London Constable superior to all others. "The method by which I make myself equal to my work," says Constable Lawrence, "consists of taking Phosferine at intervals, as in this way I keep myself alert mentally and physically." Since taking Phosferine, Constable Lawrence can remain on "point" duty in all weathers, controlling the amazing volume of City traffic, without experiencing the terrible nerve strain and weariness which formerly distressed him. Even amongst men who excel, Constable Lawrence is known as an exceedingly capable officer, equal to any emergency, and he declares that Phosferine alone enables him to maintain himself in this fine condition.

Quite removed.

Constable Lawrence, 398, High Road, Tottenham, writes:-" Possibly there is not an occupation more nerve trying than that of a "point-duty" policeman, especially when the roads are slippery and the drivers have a difficulty in holding up their horses. Add to this, the skidding of motor omnibus and the dodging of taxi-cabs, &c., it will be seen that my duty is not a pleasant one. I am sure that no one would care to change places with us for more than a few minutes, for it would at once be felt that the dangers are too numerous to cope with. Policemen look big. strong men, but are just as likely to get run down in health as other men, and this is what happened to me sometime ago, when I suffered from headaches, nerve-depression, lassitude and rheumatic pains. After trying many remedies, I was recommended Phosserine, and can say that it is a wonderful renewer of health, and seems to put fresh life into one from the first dose. I am now quite myself again, and very thankful that Phosferine was brought to my-notice."—March 5, 1910.

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

WORKING IN DUST.

Stene-cutting is a safe occupation in the open air, as shown a British Royal Commission on Mines and Quarries, and it is in factoriesespecially with the use of machine tools-that the dust becomes dangerous to health. The effects of different kinds of dust have been investigated by Dr. E. L. Collins. Cotton dust, which is very light, leads to a typical form of Esthma; and coarse emery and glass dust cause the symptoms of old age brouchitis-not phthisis. Dust was found to hinder normal chest erpansion, retarding the growth of youthful workers. Fibrous condition of the tissues is produced by dust that is not chemically broken up and absorbed in the lungs, and silicious dust is particularly dangerous. Fine dust, being so much more readily carried into the lungs, is much more harmful than coarse. The inspector of mines for western Scotland stated that in his district-where the rock is chiefly limestonehe never had seen a miner with consumption, but the disease exists in the factories where the stone is worked.

BEER WITHOUT ALCOHOL,

The dealcoholized beer of a Yorkshire brewery is produced by heating the beer to 120 F., and forcing a current of carbonic acid gas through it. The gas extracts the alcohol in the form of minute bubbles. It is claimed that the beer is unchanged in taste and flavour, although its alcohol is reduced from more than 4 per cent. to only 0.2 per cent., and the 3 gallons of spirit driven off from every hogshead of beer is a valuable material for driving motor cars, etc. The chemist believes that he has made also the singular discovery that when carbonic acid gas is forced into frozen dealcoholized beer, the alcohol is artificially increased 1 to 2 per cent.

A MUSEUM OF ACTION. The proposed industrial museum at Berlin is designed to represent German industries, with new inventions and products. The permanent exhibits are to include lantern slides and cinematographic views, showing the evolution andfuses of inventions, stages in the development of industries, and other features of progrets.

A REMARKABLE POISON. F The most powerful poison known has been extracted by a German chemist from the seeds of the ricinus, the familiar castor-oil plant, and has been attracting much attention on account of its remarkable properties. Its power is estimated to be so great that a gram-about a thirtieth of an ounce-would kill a million and a half guinea-pigs. If administered so as to cause severe illness without death it gives immunity against a larger quantity, and the dose can be gradually increased until more than a thousand times as much can be endured as would kill an untreated animal. Though arrenic, morphine and other poisons can be taken in larger and larger quantity, nothing approaching this marvellous increase of dose can be borne. The ricinus poison has effects much like those of living bacteris, and in immunized animals an antitoxin is formed, and injections of their blood sorum may cure animals that are already in danger or have become ill from ricinus poisoning.

EARTH SOUNDS IN THE PHILIPPINES. The mysterious underground noises of many parts of the world-variously known as barisal guns, pouffeurs, marinas, etc.-have attracted the notice of the Filipines. Rev. M. Saderra Moso finds that in the Philippines the soundsare heard on enclosed bays or inter-island seas and rarely on the open ceast, and occur most often between twilight and dawn and especially during the hot periods of March, April and May, though in the Pangasian province they are chiefly confined to the rainy season. They almost always seem to come from the mountains inland. They are usually low rumblings, not unlike thunder, and the natives commonly believe that they are due to waves breaking on beaches or in caverns and are connected with approaching typhoons or other weather changes. This explanation is thought to be reasonable. The typhoons are often heralded days in advance by very heavy swells, and special atmospheric conditions may carry the sounds far, their apparent inland origin being due to reflection.

AEROPIANE WIRE.

Wire and cord for aeroplanes are a special development. The wire is made in 12 sizes, with breaking strengths of 2,000 to 175 pounds. The cords for stays are of a number of fine strong wires stranded together, their strengths being 2,300 to 2,000 pounds; the flexible cord for steering gear is of six strands of seven wires each, around a centre of cotton or wire.

> PLATE OR PAPER FOR COLOUBED PHOTOGRAPHIC PRINTS.

A method of producing coloured photographic prints that may be viewed direct is claimed by a new British patent. A transparent surface has superimposed on it three transparent layers. to serve as a colour screen, a layer of orange being ruled in parallel lines, and dots of green and violet being then applied between the lines. Guide-marks serve for accurate registering. 'An opaque plate is prepared in exactly the same way, except that the rulings are in colours complementary to those first used, and this plate is govered with an emulsion of silver bromide and gelatine. A negative of the object to be reproduced is taken on an ordinary sensitive plate Grough the screen The negative is used for printing on the prepared opaque plate in the usual manner, and the print is developed and fixed. The result is a picture in the colours of the original, but covered with black dots of reduced silver-The dots may be bleached with mercuric or cupricchloride-changing the eilver into its white chloride—and the plate is dried without washing.

TALKING MOVING PICTURES

Phonoscenes, or talking moving pictures, have been much in the minds of inventors for a long time. M. Gaumont, a Frenchman, has been working eight years on the problem of combining the cinematograph with the phonograph or gramophone, so that speaking characters may be represented in the moving scenes; and he has been at last so far successful that at a recent meeting of the Paris Academy of Sciences an image of M. d'Arsonval appeared on the screen and delivered an explanatory address with gestures. Two chief difficulties have had to be overcome. It has been necessary to have the motions and the speech perfectly timed to each other, and to give much greater intensity to the sounds of the talking machine.

COLOURED HOTHOUSES.

Cultivating plants under colours, a Swiss agricultural botanist has obtained quite decided effects. Using ordinary transparent glass, the orange-coloured stimulated the plants under it but lessened their fruit; the violet glass increased the quantity of fruit, but impaired its quality; and blue and green glass had very marked injurious action.

CHAPTER V. As soon as the inquest was over and the inmates of Stone Hones free to go their own -way, Mrs. Jennings packed up her boxes and took her departure. Amongst her own personal belongings might have been noticed a white knitted scarl, the exact counterpart of the one which had been, with such deadly effect, twisted round the murdered woman's neck. Mrs. Jennin is smiled sardonically as she put it into her box. "They did not make as much out of that as I should have thought," she reflected. "That scarf, the ring, the handkerchief, those letters of enquiry about the flower form. I've known people hanged for less than that." She shuddered and poured herself out a dose of brandy from a flask which stood on her dressing table. The murder and the subsequent events had been too much for the housekeeper's nerves; they were sadly out of order.

Before she left, she had an interview with

Lizzie Polpevne. "Look here," she said, "I daresay folks wil want to know where I have gone to and why I did not stop in Sennen and take a little cottage and live there all the re-t of my life, same as old Mrs Mawgan, who was housekeeper to Pendrear, and the likes of her. As long as to silence by the offer of your hand! I am my dear mistress was alive I was content to stop afraid I must decline your kind offer." here, but I have plenty of friends in London, and it is only natural as I should like to go and see them, and enjoy myself a bit.' "La! you are going to have a gay time-ago-ing it in London, I know," said Lizzie, laughing "Well, Mrs ennings, I should never have thought it of you, but there's no knowing."

"Don't be silly," said the housekeeper reprov-ingly. "A gay time indeed! Staring at the shops and going to all the music halls. That's all you young folk think of!

Lizzie's levity was only partially dispelled by the housekeeper's superior tone.
"All right," she said. "You need not be in a taking; I will not give you away."

"What do you mean?" There was a gleam of alarm in the housekeeper's voice. "Give me away, indeed! You! Explain yourself, please."
"I only moan as I won't let out as you have gone to London to go round the alls. I'll give it out that you have gone to improve your mind at Westerinster Abbey and Madame 'I useaud's." "I have gone to stay with various friends and relations. That is simple enough. By-the-bye, do you happen to know where Miss Harriet "I did make so bold as to ask her if I should be seeing her again, me being very partial to Miss Harriet. You may, some day, says she, but at present my movements are uncertain." Maybe you'll run up agen her. Mrs Jennings, when you are visiting the 'alls-that is to say, the churches !" "Did she say she was going to London, then P' "No, that is only a bit of my stuffing. My sister is keeping company with a porter to Pen-zance and he says as he labelled her boxes Ply-

Mrs. Jounings took her departure the next day. She arrived in London that evening and was driven eastwards some three miles of Paddington. A man opened the door of the dingy house at which the cab drew up. What might have once been a handsome face was spoilt by coarsoness and by dissipation, . Why. Mother! You never let me know you were coming!" he exclaimed. "I hardly knew myself. I only made up mind after the inquest. I suppose you read all about that in the pape's?" "Yes, a rum thing they made of it. If I had had the doing of it I would have arrested that Good English Guns. precious nephew, with his evening ramble," indeed! He was in a jolly tight place!"

But he proved an alibi." "Umph! There are alibis and alibis," said her son, onigmatically.

"At all events he saved his neck," he edded, with a laugh, which evidently jarred upon his mother, for she said hastily, "I wish you would not speak like that, Bill. And, for goodness sake, don't talk any more about the murder." She sat down upon the nearest chair and he saw that her hands were trembling. "You must buck up, Mother," he said. "I don't know you like this: this affair has got on your nervos. It was a bit of a shock, I darssay, but all said and done it is not a bad thing for you. Your mind can be set at rest now.

"Yes, my mind can be set at rest" she echoed, but her expression belief her words. "Your secret is safe enough now," went on her son. I'm the only other person, I suppose, who knows it, and I don't fancy myself pro-claiming it to the world. Don't make a fool of yourself, Mother, or I shall be sorry you came. in fact I can't think why you did. "I came because oh! Bill!" Mrs Jennings' voice trailed off gradually. She rose from her chair and held out swaying arms towards her sou. The next moment she totlered and fell heavily to the ground in a dead faint. In one respect Lizzie Polperne's assertion with regard to Harriet Tramayne's movements had been quite correct. The companion had gone into Penzance by the early motor and her boxes had been labelled Plymouth. But Lizzie did not know that on the afternoon previous to her departure Harriet had taken her favourite walk to the Land's End. For some moments she had stood, her head thrown back to meet the fresh keen breeze, her dark eyes gazing out beyond the foam-topped breakers on the rocks to where the blue Atlantic rose aparfell.

As she at length brought her gaze inland she saw the form of James Tregonning rapidly approaching. Harriet frowned and her face hardened She had not wished for the invasion of her solitude.

"Oh! Miss Harriet," began Tregonning. Looking out towards the Scilly Isles! Thinking of that little flower farm you were so anxious to hear about, oh P" Harriet turned and faced him with flashing

"It would be foolish to pretend I do not understand your insult. With a man of your stamp, Mr. Tregonning, it is necessary to pay you back in your own coin; you would not understand more delicate methods. So may I remind you that there were other things which looked even more awkward for you?"

His sallow face flushed. "Ha! ha!" he said. with an attempt at jooularity. "Very good, my dear. I won't say I did not deserve it. My little moonlight ramble, ch? What a deuce of a fuss the coroner made about it! But I procured an alibi, did the thing all in the proper style Ha! ha! I let them have their little joke, and I had mine. Squared them all properly, didn't I ?" He looked narrowly at Harriet out of the corner of his eye, and seemed anxiously awaiting her reply.

"Oh! I suppose so, "she said, indifferently. "Suppose so, ch? What do you mean by "Exactly what I say. Tregonning looked at her doubtfully. Her eyes had strayed seaward again, entirely ignoring his presence. He drew in his lips several times before he spoke again, then, coming a few steps closer, he said :

"Look here, Miss Harriet, let's cry quita. Wo've both been mirel up in a very nasty affair, and in things of this sort, of course, a woman suffers more than a man-her good name, you know, and all that sort of thing. A min can look after himself, but it's confoundedly awkward for a woman. Now, if you and I were to-er-join forces-that is, to go into partnership—you would find the situation much

"I don't understand what you are saying in the very least," she said. "If you have anything you want to say to me, please speak out plainly. I don't like these vague suggestions." "Well, I only put it like that out of delicacy for a lady's feelings. If you want plain spenking you shall have it. It is not very pleasant to think of your name being baudied about. 'Marriet Tremayne Oh! yes, the woman who was connected with the Laud's End murder. Got off, but things looked very fishy for her at the inquest.' That's how you will be talked about. Now, if you changed your name. For instance -as Mrs. James Tregonning -.

Harriet interrupted him with a pall of unaffected laughter.

"I cen't see that that would be much botter. Mrs. James Tregonning? Oh! yes! wife of the man who was connected with the Land's End murder," mimicked she. "Do you really think I would gain much by your proposal? I might be looked upon as your accomplice, bribed

Her mockery stung Tregonning, but at the same time, with her flishing eyes, she was very handsome and her £2,000 would come in very "Well, you need not take offence. I'm sure considering every thing, it is not every man who would be so ready to marry you. I suppose I have not said enough about the love and kisses, I did not think you were the sort to pay much heed to that. Still if you have a fancy for a bit of billing and cooing, I'm not the man to say may to a handsome girl like you-" "How dare you say such things?" she cried, her face allame. "Tut, tut, my love, don't get angry. Think over my proposal-don't decide hastily. It would be to your advantage to accept my offer. Think it over and let me know in a few days." "If I were to think it over for a month I should only have one answer, and that is 'No'."

Trogonning's face darkened.

"One! perhaps you will think differently one day," he said surlily. But Harriet did not heed him. She was walking away over the gorse and heather as far as her long swinging steps would take her. The next day H strict Tremayne left Penzauce. As she stepped on to the platform she noticed Tregenniar lounging near the booking office. She gave no sign of recognition and he fancisd he had passed unnoticed. He heard he take a single ticket to Plymonth and saw her step into the up-express. Then, satisfied with his morning's work, he left the station and was turning into the High Street when a heavy hand was laid upon his shoulder and a han, dark face peered into his

"I say, Mister, how could Matthew Pengelly swear as he'd saw you at Land's End at twelve o'clock on the night of the murder, considering at that moment I was with him on the beach some miles away"?

DREADFUL ECZEMA

Cured by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

That torturing and disfiguring disease has its cause in an impure condition of the blood. The impure condition of the blood often arises from a diseased condition of the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. When digestion is imperfect the nutrition of the body is inadequate to its needs. The blood becomes thin, poisons accumulate-in it, and these poisons often manifest themselves in some eruptive disease. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure diseases of the stomach, and other organs of digestion and nutrition. They eliminate poisonous substances from the blood, purifying it, and increasing its quality and richness. They get at the cause and cure perfectly diseases of the blood, and other complaints which originate in a disordered stomach.

They are a perfect Blood Purifler and a positive and permanent cure for Billousness, Indigestion, Constitution, Flesdaches/Sallow Complexion, Liver and Kluney Troubles, Piles, Pimples, Boils, and Blotches, and for Pemale Allments.

Mr. CLINT G. FORD, who has been identified with the very foremost dramatic attractions, including Gillet's "Secret Service Co," " David Harum," "The Clansman," etc., has this to say of Newbro's Herpicide :-

For years I was annoyed with dandruff and itching. of the scalp, all due to my twenty years of theatrical life with its incumbent "make-up" and wig wearing. At times the itching of the so lp was intense. All remedies failed me until I tried Herpicide, and I soon found that it was giving wonderful results. The itching and also the dandruff entirely ceased and my hair resumed its natural life and vigour.

There is no question in my mind about the reality of the dandruff germ, and I unhesitatingly recommond Herpicide to my friends in the profession."

(Signed) CLINT G. FORD.

THEATRICAL FOLK RECOMMEND

HERPICIDE NEWBRO'S

Extravagant claims for toilet remedies do not influence theatrical people, because long experience enables them to discriminate intel-ligently. They demand merit and will rarely use a preparation that is not actually worth as much or more than it costs in dollars and cents. Herpicide kills the Dandruff germ and by actual test does more good than all other hair remedies combined. This accounts for its popularity in theatrical circles.

"QUEEN ROSELLE" WRITES OF NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE.

"I take pleasure in announcing the very satisfactory results I have had from the use of Newbro's Herpicide. My hair was falling out so rapidly that I was afraid I would lose it all. A friend advised Herpicide, and after using it faithfully my hair stopped falling out, the dandraff disappeared and my hair is now very soft and glossy.

I would like to see every lady of the profession try Herpicide, for I am confident that they would be delighted with it."

(Signed) QUEEN ROSELLE.

THE HOUSE OF PENDEAR (BY MILDERD WILCOX.)

CHAPTER VI It was a dark, damp, cheerless day; the rain was falling heavily and the streets were a mass of mud. As the omnibuses rattled down the Strand, the conductors shouted out, with pitying grin, the ominous announcement "Outside only!" Hausoms and "taxis" did a roaring trade, station and tubes were thronged with dripping passengers, while here and there a solitory cyclist, with water running off his shiny cape, threaded his way amongst the

From under the friendly awning of a bookseller's shop a young man stood surveying the somewhat depressing scene. He had just left Charing Cross station, and carried a small black Gladstone bag in his hand. He looked about him with interested, though not familiar, gaze. "How the motor traffic has increased since I was last here," he muttered "The place absolutely teems with them; Good old gees! Times are changed for you as well as for me, we both have to take a back seat nowadays. Well I suppose I had better look out for a lodging for a couple of nights and then I am off to the continent. There is no welcome for me in England. I don't know a soul in London, thank goodness. If I did I should not be here, afraid to show my face, bearing an assumed name, suffering for a sin I never committed! My God! is there any justice in this world?" His face hardened and an angry light flashed into his oyes. He was a young min of perhaps some seven end twenty years; about the average height. with a supple sinewy figure and a face in which the brown eyes and finely chiselled nose were the most prominent features.

He hailed a passing bus and was lucky enough to find one empty place inside. He looked round curiously at his fellow-passengers.
Opposite to him was a girl reading a magazine. Her eyes were bent upon its pages and he was not aware that she was studying him intently. Upon his entry a look of recognition had crossed her face, followed by one of astonishment. Once she almost bent forward as if to speak, then, on second thoughts, she changed her mind.

At Sloane Square they both got out.

The young man looked rount him with a smile that held more sadness than pleasure. A host of recollections flooded his mind. As in a dream he crossed the open space. The slippery roads were thronged with traffic; a motor suddenly coming round the corner blew its horn to un-heeding ears—there was a hasty cessation of the throbbing engines—and then a still, white foam was seen stretched on the road.

A crowd at once gathered. In the forefront was the woman who had been the young man's fellow-nassenger. As the policeman laid his sonseless burden almost at her feet, she leaned forward with an involuntary movement and an exclamation which draw the attention of the crowd to herself. "Did you know the young gentleman, Miss?" asked the burly policeman, his graff tones lowered, his own raddy face a triffs paler than The girl stepped forward and took up her position by the senseless form.

"Yes. He is my brother." A murmur of sympathy ran through the crowd; all eyes were fixed on the face of the girl. Here and there were comments on her appearance and on her brother's fate.

Poor young thing! Her voice all of a tremble, too! No one can wonder at it. He can't get over it, not he; he's gone beyond the doctors now. I always did say that them motors were the invention of the devil." And so on, each one having his little word to

Meanwhile a sad procession was moving slowly on. An ambulance had been procured on which was placed the injured man; beside it walked his sister, falking to the doctor who had hastily been summoned

"He has been abroad; I did not expect him back so soon. What was that you said? Many illnesses? A strong constitution? I really do not know. Oh! I beg your pardon, you must excuse me; you can understand the shock has so "No, no, of course. But you are bearing it splendidly," said the doctor, sympathetically. He was a young man and the eyes that looked into his were large and bright.

"Do you think he will recover?" asked the girl, and the auxiety in her voice touched his "We must not give up all hope, you know," he said, evasively. "I can not disguise from you that the injuries he has sustained are very serious, but life is not entirely extinct. I can not say any more at present.

She did not reply, and soon they reached a mill house in one of the quiet side streets off the King's Road. "Lam lodging bere," said the girl. "My brother must be taken into my room.

The landlady was standing on the steps look-ing with dazed and frightened eyes at the little procession which had halted at the door of her

The bearers laid their senseless burden on the bed. As soon as they had gone, the doctor appropoled the bedside and bent over the prostrate form.

Then he raised his head and looked pityingly at the girl who was watching his every "It is all over. He died on the way. You must try and be thankful that he was saved a great deal of terrible jain." The girl buried her face in her hands. "Leave ma alone with him," she said, and they heard her shut and lock the door. " Leave her alone for a bit," said the doctor. "Let her have her cry out, if she can."

"That I will," responded the kind-hear ed land-lady. "She's not been with me long, and I did not know she had a brother. She kept herself to herself, as the saying is; but a pleasant young lady enough."

"I will see that everything is done in due form," remarked the doctor. "Meanwhile I am sure the is in good hands." Some time after his departure, Mrs. Johnson knocked softly at that locked door. "Come, my dear," she said, kindly. "You must not stay in there fretting any longer. You come in the front room, Miss, and let me get you a nice cap of tea."

The door opened and the girl, very pale, but wit no traces of tears, appeared. "She does bear up most wonderful," confided Mrs. Johnson to the woman who came to perform the last sad offices. " Just quiet and subdued-like, as she ought to be, but no fass or takings on." "And them so devoted, tco," replied her friend, "There was her photograph in the poor young man's pocket, and a letter addressed to her, care of some post office, just going to be sent to her. I expect, to tell her he had arrived."

"Well, I never. It's easy to see she is his sister, they are as alike as two peas." While this conversation was being conducted in low whispers, its subject in the little book-room was looking through the small stock of possessions in her brother's travelling bag.

1 he owns nothing either of interest or value. A night suit, tooth brush, razor, slippers, etc.,

that was virtually all.

His wardrobe was very limited, and it was evident that he possesse i no careful womenkind to superiontend his garments, for they were unmended and unmarked. A few pounds and a few notes as to the continental train service completed his possessions.

"In fact," remarked the doctor, "if you had not recognised your brother he could not have been identified. The letter to yourself and possibility of its happening before they have your photograph are the only clues." The young doctor was very interested in the case and some few days after the funeral he mad a protext to visit the house again, h ping for the ing a state of mind is, naturally, the earnest night of the girl's pale, attractive, face. However, he saw no one but Mrs Johnson, wh nformed him that her lodger had gone away leaving no address. (To be continued.)

THE TRAGEDY OF BRAIN-FAG.

A FAMOUS NOVELIST'S CONFESSION.

To feel that one's brain is tired, that one's grip and power of concentration are no longer what they were, is a tragedy which only those who have gone through it, or who dread the made adequate provision for their responsibilities, can fully appreciate.

To be rescued from the clutches of so depresswish of everyone. This can be readily done by having arrived from the above Ports, Conmeans of Sanstogen, the world-renowned reconstituent and revitalising agent which is endorsed by over fourteen thousand doctors, including the physicians to ten crowned heads of Europe.

Sanatogen contains organic phosphorus in exactly the condition in which it is present in the brain and nervous system. It is, thus, casily assimilated and stored up by the brain to supply the overdraft which the body has made on this invaluable, vital substance.

What Sanatogen has done in these cases is vividly indicated by Madame Sarah Grand, the | vessel will be landed and stored at Consignees' famous authoress, who writes :- "Sanatogon has done everything for me which it is said to be able to do for cases of nervous debility and exhaustion. I began to take it after nearly four years of enforced idleness from extreme debility and felt the benefit almost immediately. And now, after taking it steadily three times a day for twelve weeks, I find myself able to enjoy both work and play again, and also able to do as much of both as ever I did. It is daily bread to my work.

Sanatogen may be obtained of all Chemists.

THE IRON HAND IN EGYPT.

Sir Eldon Gorst, the British Agent in Egypt

has come to the conclusion that British concessions have been misunderstood as a symptom of weakness, and that it is necessary the administration should be conducted with a firmness that will leave no doubt in the minds of the Nationalists of the futility of their agitation.

In his report on the condition of Egypt and the Soudan, issued as a White paper, the British Agent states that in 1909 and the first half of 1910 there was a steadily increasing tendency on the part of the Legislative Council and the General Assembly to become mere instruments of the Nationalist suitation project.

instruments of the Nationalist agitation against the occupation. He continues:— Their repeated demands for full constitutional government, the acrimonious attacks on the Government in connection with the Budget and the Soudan, and the unreasonable hostility and suspicion displayed in the discussion of the Suez Canal scheme, were in their essence manifestations of Anglophobia stirred up by the Nationalist party. The main idea of that party has been to bring the occupation to an end by nikking its task an impossibility, and the chief methods employed consist in undermining the influence of the Anglo-Egyption officials by consistent abuse, insulting all Egyptians who do not take up an aptagonistic attitude to British control, and inciting to disorder whenever an opportunity offers.

In the execution of this programme the General Assembly and Legislative Council leut themselves as auxiliaries, with the result that their newly acquired importance was used as a wear on against there to whom they owed it. The conclusion to be drawn is that the policy of ruling this country in co-operation with native Ministers is, at the present time, incompatible with that of encouraging the development of so-called representative institutions.

ILL-TIMED CONCESSIONS.

In my view the principal and sufficient reason has been that from first to last the adoption of this policy has been attributed both by the Egyptians and by the local European colonies to an attempt to pacify the Nationalist agitation by ill-timed concessions, and to an intentional diminution of British authority.

We have to make the Egyptians understand that his Majesty's Government do not intend to allow themselves to be hustled into going further or faster in the direction of self-government than they consider to be in the interests of the Egyptian people as a whole. Until this elementary lesson has been thoroughly learnt, no proposals for further developing the Legislative Council can be usefully entertained.

The experience of the last few years shows that the axiom that British policy will not be moved from the right course by agitation or violence, either from the one side or the other, is not easily grasped. In the past, more words and declarations have not proved sufficient for the purpose. Within the feeble measure of my means I have done my best, in my recent annual reports, to impress upon the members of the Legislative Council the fact that no extension of the functions of the Council is possible until it is clear that such a course can be

UNHEEDING EARS.

This counsel has so far fallen on unbeeding ears. It may be hoped that a better fate is in store for the official declaration May-Macasser 6th May, Coal-Java- made on behalf of his Majesty's Government in the House of Common in June last, to the effect that there can be no hope of further progress in Egypt until the agitation against the British occupation has ceased

The most convincing argument, and perhaps the only one that will bring the lesson home, will be when the event has shown that these ZAFIRO, American str., 1,408, M. C. Smith, statements are not mere figments of speech, but represent the actual lines upon which the attempt to help the Egyptians forward wi continue to be conducted.

We have made an honest attempt to gauge how far the wish for extension in the direction of self-government can be met without impairing the standard of administration attained under the present regime, and we have nothing to reproach ourselves with if those who could have helped the attempt to succeed have preferred to take up a hostile attitude.

ALLAGAR RUBBER ESTATES (LIMITED).

The first ordinary general meeting was held last month at Winchester House, Old Broad-street, under the presidency of Mr. Charles Bulkeley Suiton, the Chairman of the

The Chairman observed that the period under review covered 14 months. The total output of rubber from the estates was 39,870lb. which might be considered favourable taking into account the small area tapped. The health of labourers had given a good deal of an xiety to the directors, but the latest reports indicated that the general conditions were more favourable. They had been suffer. This vat was started by the late Robert Thorn ing in common with most estates in the Malay of Greenock and has been sold as No. 4 since 1831. Peninsula from a rearcity of Javanese and Tamil labour, and at the present moment a lot of the work, which so far had been satisfactory, was being undertaken by Chinese contractors. The Company had a total area of 685 acres of rubber, three years old and upwards. After reading an extract from their visiting agent in proof of the very satisfactory growth of the trees, and remarking that their robustness was further emphasized by the rapid renewal of bark. he stated that with reference to extensions it was the directors intention to bring the cultivated area up to about 1,000 acres. A new factory was in course of erection, and it was expected to be completed and running in about a month's time. The cost of production worked out roughly at about lv. 6. per lb. f.c.b. Penang. and taking into consideration that the rubber up to the present had been made by more or less primitive methods, that might be considered extremely low. After writing off one-third of the preliminary expenses, and debiting £1,002 4s. 8d., the London charges, to revenue, there was a net profit of £8,729 11s. 7d, out of which the directors proposed to pay a dividend of 10 per cent.; less income-tax, leaving to be carried forward £993 15s. 9d. The directors had concluded a forward contract for about 22,400lb. of rubber at 6s. 7d. per lb, to be delivered in equal monthly quantities. The total output given in the report for 1911 was estimated at 62,000lb., but from the latest advices from the visiting agent this had been increased to 65,000lb. It was expected that when they had the full 1,000 scree of rubber in bearing the yield should be at least from 300,000 lb. to 350,000 lb. per annum. and taking that at a profit of only 1s. 6d. per 1b., it would result in a profit of nearly £27,000, which would admit of a dividend on the present capital of about 30 per cent. (Cheers.) Of course, that was only taking the present price of rubber at Mr. Halford W. Hewitt, in seconding the motion, stated that, at the request of his co-directors, he went out to see the property. He went over the Allagar estate particularly, and he found it to be second to none of the estates he saw—to the number of 20 certainly. The motion was unanimously adopted, and the proposed dividend was agreed to. A vote of thinks to the Chairman and the directors and the managers and the staff in the East brought the meeting to a close.
